first Impressions

Let's take a fresh look at your home's entryway—the door, trim and foyer—where first impressions are made. As always, we hope to convey a stylish sense of warmth and welcome to our guests. Updating the paint colors here is easy and manageable, but it makes a big impact on curb appeal ... and guest appeal.

WE HAVE THE TIPS AND PALETTES TO HELP YOU MAKE A FIRST IMPRESSION THAT LASTS.

Let your home's architecture inspire you.

When your home is a classic (like Craftsman, Tudor or Colonial style), you can look to the past for color inspiration; traditional deep hues still work, decade after decade. Mid-century and modern homes can handle a bold jolt of color to punctuate their streamlined style. In the end, it's up to you but feel free to explore beyond your usual choices.

Adding a fresh color to your front door improves your home's curb appeal and demonstrates to guests that you care. So does polishing your front door hardware! Whenever you freshen the color be sure to freshen your metals, too. It makes a big difference!

You're living in a palette

Consider neighboring colors already in play—the siding, brick, roof and nearby foliage. You might find it easy to coordinate your front door in an already-curated palette. If not, try incorporating seasonal accessories like planters and flowers to make everything in view work together beautifully.

Don't forget about the trim

The door trim serves as a frame for the door structurally and visually. It can be the same color as the rest of the home's trim or stand out as a door-enhancing accent.

Welcoming guests inside the Foyer

Choosing the right color for your foyer sets the stage for the rest of your home. The color can be bold and dramatic like a party invitation or a soft neutral that invites guests to leave their worries at the door.

When selecting colors for your foyer, consider the space. If the room is small and self-contained, consider a bold, daring color that might be too much in a larger room. With open and transitional floor plans, neutral colors help create a cohesive flow. Reduce visual busy-ness by painting trim and the interior door surface to match.

Finally, remember to choose a high-quality paint like Pratt and Lambert Interior Premium Paint & Primer. Your efforts will be rewarded for a finish that will stay beautiful and last a long time.

Welcome home!
